

DEUTERONOMY

Written by: Moses

Key People: Moses, Joshua

Key Places: The Arabah in Moab

Special Feature: Fall of walls in Jericho, Wondering in the Wilderness, Crossing over the River Jordan

This book is written in the form of a treaty between a king and his vassal state typical of the second millennium. It calls Israel to remember who God is and what he has done. Lacking faith, the old generation had wandered for 40 years and had died in the wilderness. They left Egypt behind, but never knew the Promised Land. Then on the east bank of the Jordan River, Moses prepared the sons and daughters of that faithless generation to possess the land. After a brief history lesson emphasizing God's great acts on behalf of his people, Moses reviewed the Law. Then he restated the covenant – God's contract with his people.

As you hear the message of Deuteronomy, remember how God has expressed his kindness in your life, and then commit yourself anew to trust, love, and obey him.
